

Andy's Photoshop Tip #3 - Round Beveled Button

1 Make a new file that is square. Use the selection tool  and make a circle from the center of the image.

2 Choose a light color for the 1st color and then darker color for the 2nd color.

Using the gradient tool  inside the selection, fill the circle from light to dark (depending on where you want the light coming from). This example just used a 45 degree angle from the top left.

3 Now make a smaller circle inside of the first and fill it with the same colors from the opposite side.

4 The final step is to type any word on the button that you want to. For best results use a contrasting color that is easy to read. Also, make sure you have anti-aiasing turned on.
